

NO BETTER WAY TO BREAK A BAD COLD

Surely Cures the Most Severe Cold and Ends Grippe Misery in Just a Few Hours.

The most effective and harmless way to cure the grippe or break a severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach, or limbs, is a dose of Pape's Cold Compound, every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel the cold breaking and all grippe symptoms going after the very first dose. It promptly relieves the most miserable neuralgia, pains, headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic aching.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any drugist in the world can supply.

After three years' research, we have conclusively demonstrated that quinine is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

She still rides by in splendid style. The envy of the crowd. Her husband has increased his pile, And she is fair and proud; But, ah, the dog she used to prize Is gone—poor little chap! A cunning doll now occupies His place upon her lap.

When Her Back Aches

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Barre women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Barre woman's words:

Mrs. Frank Jones, 106 South Main street, Barre, Vt., says: "About five years ago, when living in Worcester, I began to suffer from kidney trouble and had such terrible pains in my back at times that I could hardly get about. If I arose too quickly after stooping, sharp twinges darted through my hips and I often had severe attacks of dizziness. At night, it was impossible for me to sleep well, and during the day I was tired and worn out. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so, although I had not much faith in their merit. After using them a few days, I found that they were helping me, and I continued taking them until the pains in my back had entirely disappeared. The other symptoms of my trouble were also greatly relieved and I felt better in every way."

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Nigger" at Barre Opera House Next Tuesday Evening.

The attraction at the opera house next Tuesday, Nov. 5, will be Edward Sheldon's remarkable race problem play, "The Nigger," and it promises to be one of the most interesting dramatic events of the year. "The Nigger" is based upon the greatest of the famous new theatre's successes. William A. Brady, (Itd.) has arranged a country-wide tour for the play this season.

"The Nigger" is a powerful play and makes a tremendous appeal to the emotions. The New York World calls it "A play of thrills." There is a lynching, a political campaign, a race riot, and a series of other sensational incidents and interest is kept at fever heat throughout the play. The plot centers about the efforts of one Clifton Noyes, a politician and distiller, to prevent the signing of a prohibition bill. He threatens the governor to expose him as a "nigger" if he does not veto the bill.

The governor, however, signs it, and Noyes, who has discovered that Morrow's grandmother was a quadroon woman, threatens to make the fact known through a newspaper he owns. Morrow anticipated him, releases his sweetheart from her promise to marry him, renounces his political ambitions and determines to live among the people of his own race. The scenes between Morrow and Noyes and between the governor and his sweetheart are dramatic in the extreme and the play throughout is one to be remembered. Tickets at Kendrick's Saturday.

To-morrow evening occurs the first agricultural meeting to be given under the auspices of the board of trade, the general subject to be "Apple Culture."

There will be two sessions, the first opening at 10 a. m., and the afternoon session at 1:30.

The Vermont Historical society holds a public meeting this evening in Representatives' hall at which Matt B. Jones will speak on "The Making of a Hill Town."

Ernest M. Kimball and Mrs. Anna R. Styles Gage were married yesterday by Rev. L. J. Banbury, pastor of the Baptist church. They are now on a wedding trip through New Hampshire and southern Vermont.

Miss Ruth Wilson was tendered a surprise party Tuesday evening on the occasion of her eighteenth birthday anniversary, a large number of her friends greeting her at the home of her brother, Edward O. Gould, on Bailey avenue.

Rev. Robert Clark, pastor of the Federated church at Randolph Center, and Mrs. Charles Spaulding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Spaulding of Warren, were united in marriage yesterday here by Rev. S. F. Homfield. Mr. Clark was the pastor of the Congregational church in Warren previous to accepting the call to Randolph Center.

Montpelier high school defeated the seminary yesterday afternoon by the score of 5 to 0, taking advantage of a fumble. The score was made in the first period and the rest of the game was without features. The high school paraded the street last night and had a bonfire, while the seminary students were conspicuous by their absence.

It was the first time in two years that the seminary had been beaten.

Calls have been issued to representative men from all over the state for a meeting to be held in Representatives' hall Wednesday evening, November 10, at 7:30 p. m., to form a state board of trade. This is for the purpose of beaming the state and those present will discuss the best ways of bringing Vermont to the front and advertising her unsurpassed qualifications for summer tourists, her abundant water powers, good farms and prosperous people. It is thought a state organization of this kind could accomplish wonderful results.

The case of Henry L. Blanchard against the Vermont Shade Roller company was heard yesterday afternoon in supreme court. This was an appeal by the defendant from the decision of the lower court, when the motion of the defendant for a verdict in his behalf was denied and the case allowed to go to the jury, which returned a verdict of $6,000 for the plaintiff.

Mr. Blanchard was employed by the defendant company when, July 28, 1909, he was struck by a heavy truck, which fell from one of the floors above upon him, as he was working in the elevator pit. The plaintiff alleged that he was crushed down by the weight of the truck and received such injuries as to incapacitate him for work. F. W. Tuttle and F. L. Fish were attorneys for Blanchard and Brown and Hopkins and V. A. Ballard for the defendant. Other cases heard yesterday were state against James A. Merrill for selling from Chittenden county, and Douglass & Varnum against the village of Morrisville, an action of assumpsit in which the plaintiff seeks to secure compensation for extra work performed in the erection of the dam at that place, Morrisville.

MEAD'S PROCLAMATION

Naming Thursday, November 24, As Thanksgiving Day.

Gov. Mead's Thanksgiving day proclamation, naming Thursday, November 24, as Thanksgiving day, is as follows:

Almost three centuries ago, after the first harvest had been gathered by the Pilgrim fathers in this western world, a colonial governor named a day for a religious festival, when the pioneer should call around him his loved ones and companions to offer Thanksgiving for the humble blessings of that olden time. Crude, rude and simply seem now the benefactions of that day, but possibly with prophetic visions, the colonists looked down the vista of the years and saw the glorious present of our time. Culture, liberty, equality, yes, all that science, art, education and civilization have wrought and won, may have swept before him in the richest panorama that mankind had hoped and prayed for in all the ages that had gone before. Then established, it has had continued observance; then local, it is now national, for in every home between the oceans we look forward to the good cheer and friendly meetings of that day. Peace, progress, prosperity and plenty have crowned the passage of the years. In conformity with this custom so established and so long continued, I, John A. Mead, governor, do hereby set aside and appoint Thursday, the 24th day of November, A. D. 1910, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, that upon festive meetings and places of assembly to render thanks to Almighty God for His great goodness and His loving care.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the state, this 9th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and thirty-fifth.

John A. Mead, governor.

By the governor, Harvey H. Kingsley, secretary of civil and military affairs.

My Sympathetic Friend

By SUSAN YOUNG FALMER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

My father and mother both died when I was so young that I have no remembrance of them, and I was sent to an orphan asylum. When I was eighteen the matron one morning called me into her room and said to me:

"You have been very useful to me here since you passed out of childhood, but I am expected by the managers to get on without help. You are now old enough to be self supporting and must either work for yourself alone or in a home. I occasionally receive a letter from some man desiring one of our grown girls for a wife. I had one of these letters this morning from a young man in the west, who says that he has a good farm on which he lives alone, and he wishes me to send him some one for a helpmeet whom I can recommend, and he has forwarded letters recommending him. Let me know if you wish the position."

The matron was used to condensing everything she said just as she had spoken these words. She was a good woman, but was so intimately connected with the world's troubles that she could not give much attention to those of any one person. She turned to other duties, and I left her to go to my room to think.

The result of my fearful deliberations was that I was a few days later handed a ticket and what money I would need on the journey and took a train for the west. My leaving was telegraphed to my future husband, who was to meet me at the station, marry me and drive me twenty miles to his farm. I had no money with which to return or go anywhere else in case he should prove disagreeable. Indeed, I felt as though I had been pitched over a precipice.

The train had left Chicago and we were bowling along toward the Mississippi. I noticed a young man sitting near me who was looking at me, I thought sympathetically. I must have shown my dependency in my face, for his own regretted it or, rather, bespoke commiseration. Presently he came over to me and said, with an encouraging smile:

"You look troubled. Is there anything I can do or say to make you feel happier?"

There was that in his honest face and eyes that invited confidence. I told him my story. He listened to it attentively and respectfully and when I had finished said:

"Has it occurred to you that the man who is to marry you is in the same position with regard to you that you are with regard to him?"

"I never thought of that."

"And do you know that many so called love matches turn out very unhappily?"

"I supposed," I replied, "that it was the forced marriages such as the one I am about to make that are failures."

"There is no truer saying than that marriage is a lottery. I think you have a better chance in yours than those people who, blinded by love, see no fault until a number of them are plainly visible after marriage. Unbiased persons have recommended this man to you and you to him. You both trust to them instead of your own judgment biased by love. The chances are largely in your favor."

"What you say," I replied, "sounds encouraging, but it seems to me that I would rather begin with love even if I must end with disappointment."

"Spoken like a woman," he rejoined. "And I would rather begin without love and end with love."

What a treasure ate these people who have the faculty of lifting the cloud that hangs over us and showing us the sun shining behind it. This young man seemed to have only an ordinary education, but any deficiency was made up by common sense. Then, too, it was easy to see that he had a kind heart. He was constantly looking at me out of those sympathetic eyes of his, which said, "Poor child, how I pity you!" He was with me most of the morning and all the afternoon. He soon ceased to talk about my trouble, leading me into other paths, though he told me many instances of persons who had made marriage a matter of business and found it a matter of affection.

My lover—I was certainly thinking the word, mockery that it was—had written that my train would land me in the night at the last principal town on my route, and I was to remain there, taking another train the next morning. When I parted with my newly made friend I relapsed into the same miserable condition as before. But I was tired, and that night, though I went to sleep in tears, I got a fairly good rest. This and a bright morning kept me up the next day till I approached the last station, where I was to meet "my lover," when it was all to end.

I could do to resist a temptation to throw myself from the train. I permitted every one to go out before me and wished there were more of them. Then when alone I nerved myself for the ordeal and left the car.

My lover was there waiting for me, extending his hand to assist me down the steps.

A sudden wonder mixed with a wild fluttering of my heart caused me to pause. Was I in a dream or was I waking from sleep? The man waiting to hand me down was my sympathetic friend.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla Temperance

Magazine Review

A Novel Way to Raise Money.

"To raise a considerable amount of money with a very little trouble is to form a story chain, for a winter," says Martha Landon in Woman's Home Companion for November.

"A group of ten women meet at the home of one of them on an afternoon and one reads aloud a story, something worth listening to, like The Toy Shop or The Man Without a Country or any of the best short stories; then tea is served and perhaps there is a little music. Each person present pays an admission fee of twenty-five cents. In turn each of the ten guests gives a similar tea at her home and the same program is followed, and each of these guests gives a tea; when this has been done three or four times, the 'chain' comes to an end, but the treasury is filled."

Trying to Console.

"My son," remarked the stern parent, "when I was your age I had very little time for frivolous diversions."
